New trustee could alter complexion of co. board

The draw from a hat to select a representative from South Amarillo for the Randall County Board of School Trustees could portend a change in the board's stand on future decisions concerning school land annexation.

Gordon Hendricks, a South Amarillo insurance agent, was selected as trustee from precinct 4, an Amarillo precinct which lies wholly within the Amarillo school district, after his name was drawn from a wide-brimmed cowboy hat.

Hendricks was reluctant following the Tuesday meeting to discuss his philosophy on the school annexation issue, the most controversial subject presented to the county school board in its history.

"Really and truly," he said, "I don't know too much about this yet. I'll have to do some more study on it."

However, Hendricks revealed at least partially his thoughts on the status of property owners who purchase property and then try to talk the county school board into allowing their children to attend another district's schools.

"I look at it this way," he said. "Where I live I know my children have to go to Crockett and Paramount and I accept that fact. Anywhere I might live, I feel I know where I'm at."

He indicated parents are responsible for knowing where their children will go to school when they purchase property.

Hendricks would not comment on his feelings about allowing subdivision developers to petition to have their lands annexed by another school district.

While Hendricks would not reveal his feelings on the annexation issue, which has become a hot topic for the county trustees since five families petitioned more than a year ago to have 176 acres of development land taken from the Canyon School District and annexed by Amarillo, he did receive wholehearted support both Tuesday and in earlier trustee meetings from Trustee Charles Purcell, who has been ardently opposed to allowing Amarillo to annex Canyon school property.

Purcell moved during a meeting two weeks ago that Hendricks be appointed to replace Don Marsh, who has served as representative from precinct four since 1969. However, Purcell's motion died for lack of a second in that meeting.

He moved again Tuesday that Hendricks be appointed, but the vote on the motion ended in a tie.

Purcell was one of two school trustees who last November voted against the annexation petition submitted by the five families in the Glandale subdivision to allow their children to attend Amarillo schools. County Board Chairman R. B. Gist, Jr. also voted against the proposal.

In action Tuesday, Marsh lost his seat on the board after Dist. Atty. Randall Sherrod dipped his hand into County Judge Woody Pond's Stetson and pulled out a piece of paper with Hendricks' name on it.

Sherrod had earlier in the meeting told trustees it was up to them to appoint a trustee to serve precinct four, a unique precinct in the county. No one could have been elected April 5 to the seat for that precinct, due to an attorney general's ruling that only those persons who live within the school district served by the county board would vote in the election. Since precinct four is wholly within the Amarillo School District and Amarillo is not under the control of the county board, the opinion said, those residents of that precinct could not vote for a trustee.

Marsh's term of office expired as of election day, but, according to Sherrod, he could serve under a constitutional provision until a successor was elected or appointed.

Sherrod recommended the board appoint either Marsh or Hendricks to fill the seat from the precinct.

After hearing Sherrod's opinion of the situation, Gist suggested "we could put two or

Commissioners to Austin for meet with solons

Canyon city commissioners will head for Austin today to breakfast with Texas legislators Monday morning and discuss pending legislation which could impact on the city.

Mayor Manly Bryan and commissioners Willis Harrison, Jim Christopher and H.R. Fulton Jr. are scheduled to attend the legislative breakfast, which is sponsored for representatives of all Texas cities by the Texas Municipal League.

Metcalf said he expects discussion during the session to focus primarily on utility regulation and on changes in the taxing system in the state.

Several bills are now pending in both House and Senate which would establish some sort of regulation of utilities.

Metcalf said TML information given member cities indicate a wide variety of approaches to providing utility regulation.

One bill, he said, would establish a state-wide utilities commission much like the Texas Railroad Commission but with regulatory authority.

Currently, Texas cities are responsible for first-line regulation of utilities through franchise agreements.

Another bill under consideration in Austin would provide for a local option feature on use of a state regulatory body to settle city-utility disputes. However, Metcalf said the current status of the bill indicates the local option would be available only to those cities in the state which are large enough to have competent staffs to study utility requests and proposals.

Conservation began here 20 years ago

Forty years ago, the land, scoured by spring winds, rendered up black and threatening clouds of precious top soil as farmers learned the hard way that their acreage could not be abused without a commensurate tribute payment in kind.

Forty years ago this week, the federal government, struggling with the enormity of a national depression, added a new agency and sent its representatives into the farming areas of the nation to preach what has now become a strident message: "Protect, conserve and preserve the soil or your children will pay the consequences."

They didn't call them environmentalists then, in those early months of 1935 when the Soil Conservation Service was instituted under the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

It was 20 years later — in 1955 — that Potter and Randall County farmers got together to form a soil and water conservation district for this area. Today, Randall County has its own district and its own SCS office for the aid of local farmers.

The first meeting of the Palo Duro Soil and Water Conservation District was held March 11, 1955 with Marshall Rockwell, (See SOIL, Page 9)

Five West Texas State University beauties enjoyed a hot spring day the wet way Thursday as city water employees flushed the fire plugs throughout the city and near the campus. Temperatures rose into the 80s during the latter part of the

City eyeing future water supply

Canyon city officials have their ears to the ground these days to help them project what the future may hold for the city's water supply.

City Water Supt. Robert Rogers has begun a routine program to gather information at the city's well field near Umbarger to determine current water usage and to provide a historical base upon which to build future decisions on the water supply for the city's 9600 residents.

Collection of the data is the first step in a program to determine somewhat accurately the city's water needs in the future and is the first indication of City Manager Glen Metcalf's intent to make water for Canyon his number one priority.

Metcalf said the figures compiled so far by Rogers, who is using instruments at the well field to measure draw-down of the water table, do not indicate a significant draw-down factor.

He said no historical data is available on performance of the seven wells at Umbarger and the data now being collected by Rogers should serve to give the city some information on the water table in the field.

"I don't see any real danger in the next few years," Metcalf said, "but we do need to be looking ahead."

The records now being worked up will be kept for a number of years, he said, to give some historical perspective and so city officials "will know exactly where we stand on possible life expectancy" of the wells.

Metcalf said the city is growing and demand for water can also be expected to increase.

Due to this growth and increased demand, he said, tentative plans call for two new wells to be drilled at the Umbarger site next fiscal year. He said only one well might be drilled, however.

Apartment owners meet Thurs.

Canyon apartment owners and managers and other landlords have been invited to attend a meeting Thursday night here to discuss possible cooperation to better make known vacancies for potential renters.

The Canyon Chamber of Commerce is hosting the meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the West Texas State University activities center.

Chamber Manager Roland Black said the purpose of the meeting is to ask landlords to cooperate with the chamber in providing up-to-date information on room rates and vacancies. The chamber office acts as cleaning-house for housing information in the city and Black keeps a list of available apartment houses for students and others interested in moving to Canyon.

The Thursday meeting is the offshoot of a meeting held two weeks ago by students on the campus, who complained of high prices for apartments here and of a lack of available housing.

Black said he hopes to organize the landlords in such a fashion that they will give him timely reports on the number of apartment rental units available so that information can, in turn, be dispersed to interested potential renters.

He said the university sends students seeking off-campus housing to the chamber office for Umbarger water: Will feds help locals stop pollution?

Louis Raef leans back in the slat-backed chair in his Umbarger Grocery and runs stubby fingers through his greying hair.

"There's too darn many cesspools around here," he says emphatically, letting the words float out over his "NO PROFANITY" sign as he upends a soft drink bottle.

"Everybody's got water, but the water's getting polluted."

That's the basic problem, a problem not new to Umbarger or many other areas in Randall County. But, for more than fifty families in the German-settled community west of Canyon the problem is compounded by frustration.

The frustration is illustrated by Raef, who puts his bottle by his chair and putters to a back room, emerging moments later with a folder of material gathered over the past five years.

The folder contains maps, letters and data related to the Umbarger water pollution and sewage problem, material collected and sent to the Farmers Home Administration with the hope that funds could be allocated to give Umbarger a fresh-water system.

While Umbarger community leaders have been waiting for five years, they have heard little of hope for their formal proposals for funding through the FHA.

Now, they've just about given up. About five years ago, a group of citizens realized they were confronted by big problems in their water and sewage facilities.

A small community, unincorporated, Umbarger has no standardized water system. It has no sewer system. It has bore holes, cesspools and wells.

Some Umbarger settlers drilled their wells behind frame houses to a depth of from 100 to 160 feet to tap the plentiful underground river of the Ogallala formation.

But, they then put in either cesspools or bore holes — often fewer than 50 feet from their wells and to a depth of between 65 and 75 feet.

Right now, community leaders are in the process of testing all wells in the community for the presence of pollution.

"So far the tests are all negative," Raef said. "There's no pollution. But when we tested before four wells were contaminated. That's nothing but cesspool seepage there."

As some wells began drying up and as pollution was found in others several years ago, the citizens of Umbarger formed an informal group headed by Sylvester Batenhorst and Raef.

In 1970, they worked up formal proposals for possible FHA funding of both a water system and a sewage system for the small community. "It's a sad thing this didn't go through the first time we tried it," Raef said.

At that time 51 families and businesses vowed to subscribe to the system, if funds could be raised. The system was designed originally to service 138 people.

If FHA had approved the 1970 proposal, figures indicate only $56,000 would have been needed to build a water system from well to household.

Now, that figure is $121,000 for the system. Umbarger residents waited until fall 1974 before again trying to gain federal funding for the project.

This time, the Umbarger Community Association put together a proposal for a water system which would have water lines spreading through town from a central water well. No sewer system was sought.

The proposal was viewed favorably by the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission, which in 1973 issued a report indicating the water situation in Umbarger was "critical."

At that time the PRPC published a booklet outlining areas of need for water and sewer systems and the ultimate proposal was a two-county water and sewer system centralized in Amarillo.

From the PRPC, Umbarger's proposal last fall went to the FHA. There it lies.

Raef said he understands the FHA has no money to fund the project. Batenhorst said he (See UMBARGER, Page 9)

School board to meet Monday with PTA

Gene Howe status to be eyed

Future schools for the Gene Howe area and the possibilities for further annexation moves by Amarillo School District are expected to be key topics of discussion Monday night as Canyon School Board members travel to that area's elementary school to answer questions.

The Gene Howe PTA will host an open question-and-answer session for the membership and the school board members at 8 p.m. at the school.

Supt. Jerry Jacobs will also accompany the board members to the session.

Jacobs said he anticipates that the PTA members will be most concerned in their questions Monday night with plans the board has for future expansion in the Gene Howe area, and the board's feelings about annexation efforts by Amarillo.

But, he said, he also anticipates questions about the school curriculum and other areas.

Gene Howe area residents have been strong opponents of efforts by the Amarillo School District to annex property which now lies in the Canyon School District. The Amarillo district, for example, has proposed annexation of at least 11½ sections of uninhabited farm land just south of the Canyon-Amarillo boundary line.

Canyon board members have for the past two years been cool to the idea of allowing property now in the Canyon district to be annexed by the Amarillo district.

So opposed to such annexations have the board members been that they are now appealing to the Texas Commissioner of Education a decision made last November by the Randall County Board of School Trustees to allow 176 acres of Canyon school land to be annexed by Amarillo.

They have also indicated they do not wish to discuss the transfer of the 11½ sections of land to the Amarillo district.

Board members have virtually committed themselves on the construction of new schools in the Gene Howe area. They have purchased a large tract near the current elementary school for possible construction of a new junior high and high school.

Jacobs has predicted it will require a $5 million bond issue to construct the new schools, which board members say are needed to handle ever-increasing growth.

Gene Howe School now has two portable classrooms on campus and more are to be moved to the site next fall. The school has more than 500 students.

Killingsworth named CHS valedictorian

Canyon High School officials have announced the valedictorian, salutatorian and high-grade senior girl from this year's graduating senior class.

Russell Killingsworth, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Killingsworth of 1423 Hillcrest in Canyon, has been designated valedictorian by compiling a four-year grade average of 98.4527.

Killingsworth has been active in school activities since coming into the Canyon schools in the fifth grade.

His activities have included being president of the Student Council this year, a member of the National Honor Society, a member in Junior Who's Who, vice-president of the Thespians, a member of the CHS Choral and three years of track. Killingsworth was a district hurdle winner and regional qualifier this year.

Future plans for Killingsworth include attending Texas A&M in the fall and studying veterinarian medicine.

Our World

We Need To Belong

By ANN BROWN

A sense of belonging is essential to normal human development. The first thing God ever said was not good, was for man to live alone (Gen. 2:18).

Even a hermit usually wants to write a book — or at least a poem — for the society to which he yearns to belong.

The family is the basic unit of society. No society is stronger than the families of which it is composed.

No adult ever gets completely away from the child he once was or the parents who brought him up.

The child who grows up in a happy home where the parents love him and love each other can usually weather whatever life dishes out. Parents who love their children maintain discipline.

But the child who survives only by being clever enough to avoid the blow of abusive parents is likely to attempt to dodge his way through life — or dodge life itself.

Many bruises, however, go deeper than the ones made with clubs.

Parents who tell their children they are lazy, stupid, worthless, or "born to hang," can be reasonably sure the little ones will live up to their predictions.

And parents who treat their children like precious jewels can also look forward to the realization of their expectations.

The best thing a father can possibly do for his children is to love their mother. Any woman who is loved and cherished usually makes a good mother. One who is abused or neglected often takes out her frustrations on her children.

A boy who sees his father beat his mother may fear and hate him, but he will probably grow up to beat his own wife — only because she needs it, of course.

And the girl who sees her father abuse her mother will probably never learn to trust a man. She usually transfers her resentments toward her father to her husband — even if she marries Casper Milquetoast.

A child must be loved and cherished to feel he belongs to his family. If he does not achieve a sense of belonging at home, he usually seeks it in gangs or communes among his peers.

If he cannot relate to a peer group, he may seek solitude where there is no one to reject him. Many loners devote themselves to pets or to work with little involvement with people.

The exceptionally rebellious child is prone to turn to crime to avenge himself on the society he feels rejected him.

Loving a child is an ounce of prevention worth many pounds of cure.

Parents who cannot love their children, and give them emotional security (it has little to do with economic security) need to start saving money for psychiatrists or lawyers — or both.

And parents who do not love their children enough to provide them with the most stable, pleasant home possible, don't love them much.

Three people dwell within every adult: the child he was, the parent he became to himself when he left home, and the adult he wants to be.

The happy child with loving parents seldom encounters too much difficulty becoming the productive adult all mature people aspire to be.

The unhappy child is usually convinced the world is out to get him, and he either gives up or fights back.

Buckner Orphans Home and Boys Ranch are unusually successful in working with children.

They both major on giving them a sense of belonging. Cal Farley expressed it as "A shirt tail to hang on to."

A veteran pastor said the nicest compliment he ever received came from a 3-year-old member of his congregation. After meeting the child on the street, he overheard him tell his companions: "That feller belongs to MY church."

To belong in a family, a child needs to feel his family belongs to him. (They supply his needs.)

Children must have food, clothing, and shelter, but their need for love, peace, and a measure of fun and adventure is essential, also.

Not belonging produces loners. The loner is detrimental to himself, or to others — or both.

Past Taxes To Be Eyed

Randall County Tax Collector Mrs. Audrey Bruse is scheduled to present to county commissioners Monday the current delinquent tax roll with listings which stretch back to 1939.

Mrs. Bruse is also to report on pending legislation in Austin concerning the possible designation of Texas counties as the assessing and appraising bodies for local governmental taxing entities.

Barney Wiegand of Amarillo will meet with commissioners to discuss the proposed Interstate 70 designation for U.S. 60 from Amarillo to Las Cruces, N.M.

Commissioners are also scheduled to canvass the Tuesday constitutional amendment election.

They meet at 1 p.m. in the Canyon courthouse.

CHS Teacher Is Nominated

Leonard Kent, Canyon High School biology teacher, has been nominated for the Phi Delta Kappa award as Administrative Intern of the Year.

Kent was designated by Canyon Supt. Jerry Jacobs and high school principal John Sommer for outstanding service to the Canyon schools during this year.

The world has entered a new stage of history, the age of the maturity of man and the beginning of world awareness. The outlines for successfully establishing the unity and harmony required for this new society are found in the writings of the

A Sad Story

By CARROLL WILSON

The resignation of President Thieu has caused our State Department some little embarrassment. He has, after all, been a favorite American stepchild for a decade.

Assuming the State Department sticks by its friends, I called a buddy in Washington the other day to find out what they plan to do with Thieu now that he's among the unemployed in Vietnam.

"He's a tough case," my friend said.

"Our first problem is getting him out of his country," I asked.

"How do you plan to do that?" I asked.

"We have him scheduled for a flight next week on one of the Operation Babylift planes."

"I thought that was just for orphans," I said.

"He is an orphan," my friend said emphatically.

"Of course he is," I said soothingly. "What are you gonna do with him once you fly him out of Vietnam?"

"Well," said my friend, "we're billing him in our advance literature as a cute, plump little fellow with dark hair and loveable eyes. Although he's a little old, we think he's marketable."

"You mean you're putting him up for adoption?"

"Of course," my friend said testily. "We can't just have him roaming around the United States without some proper upbringing, can we?"

"Have you had any luck finding foster parents for him?" I asked, changing the subject.

"Well," he said, "we had a call from a young couple in Akron, Ohio, but they said they weren't sure they wanted an Oriental. The inscrutableness frightened them. I think."

"I can understand that," I said.

"Then, we had a couple call in from Riverside, Calif., and we told them about Thieu and they said they were interested in a baby which didn't have so many problems."

"That's understandable," I said. "But, what kind of problems does he have. He looks healthy to me."

"Well," my friend said, "he's from a broken family, you know. He feels rejected, abandoned and alone in the world."

"How sad," I said.

"And," my friend went on, "he's kind of irritable and easily upset. We've had trouble convincing possible parents that he'd love, honor and obey them."

"You just never can tell from outside appearances, can you," I said.

"No, you can't," my friend said. "And, our information indicates he's given to temper tantrums."

"You say he's from a broken family," I said. "Do you know anything about his parents?"

"Well," my friend said, "he was reared by a great uncle, a rich one at that. But, we think, frankly, that the old boy spoiled young Thieu, gave him too many material things and all that, you know."

"Sounds to me like you've got the makings of a juvenile delinquent on your hands," I said warily.

"We're afraid of that," my friend said. "But, he's got his good points. He's a wonderful domino player and he loves to tinker with mechanical things like airplanes and tanks and missiles."

"Wait a minute," my friend said, anxiously. "How about you and your wife? Would you be interested in a cute, plump little fellow who's all alone in the world?"

I stammered.

"Well," I said, "We've got these three daughters, you see, and, well, really, three's company and Thieu's a crowd."

The Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officer Standards and Education has certified the criminal justice administration program at West Texas State University. Dr. Brent Lynch, program director, left, Charles Parks, a graduate student in the program, and Dick Jackson, assistant director, examine the certification issued last week. Lynch said the certification for the program, which is under the School of Arts and Sciences and Dean Ted Freidell, means area students who complete the program can receive official state certification. The program is interdisciplinary.

Summer Festival Set For July 4

The stage is being set for an open air summer festival to be held on Saturday, July 4, as a commemorative project for the Panhandle Centennial and to lead the way for the observance of the American Revolution Bicentennial in 1976.

"This summer," said Jane Stephens, Festival committee chairman, "we are planning a lot of activities to include the total community on July 4."

Tentative plans call for a parade to kick off the affair at 5 p.m. throughout the city leading to Conner Park for community barbecue supper. After folks feast on barbecue they will have the opportunity to see a variety of in-action exhibits showing the trades and activities of their forefathers, as well as other exhibits displayed at the park.

The festival exhibits will include a number of in-action booths where local residents will be making soap, doing their wash on the washboard, quilting, making butter, conducting old fashioned games for adults and children and displaying early education principles.

In addition to the in-action exhibits already planned by local clubs, others may arrange for exhibit space to display arrowheads, antique tools, quilts, etc., according to the chairman, Mrs. Stephens. For information about either type of exhibit, clubs and individual residents are asked to contact the chairman at 655-2259 for information. In the event of inclement weather, the exhibits will be set up at the all-purpose room of Rex Reeves Elementary School for viewing.

At the festival committee's meeting recently plans were also discussed for a "trader's fair" to be held in conjunction with the exhibits. Table space for the "trader's" will be available at $5 per area.

And while folks are viewing exhibits music for a "street dance" is planned to be held on the adjacent parking lot of the swimming pool. Other booths throughout the park will be offering such eats as Buffalo Burgers by the Boy Scouts, corn-on-the-cob by the Chamber of Commerce, and bowls of ice cream by the women's division of the Chamber. Other clubs and groups desiring to have concessions for the evening should make arrangements with the chairman.

Topping off the evening will be the traditional "fireworks display" being planned for around 9:30 p.m. by the Canyon Chamber of Commerce.

Working alongside Mrs. Stephens in planning the summer festival are John Childs, Charlotte Brantley, Margaret Harper, Celia Mitchell, Sylvia Webb, Becky Hall, and Charlotte McClure. Other residents have also been welcomed to serve with the committee or make further suggestions for the festival to the chairman.

Awards Banquet Tuesday Night For WT Group

Dr. Robert H. Anderson, Dean, College of Education, Texas Tech University, will be the speaker at the Awards Night Banquet of the Amarillo Chapter, Phi Delta Kappa.

The banquet will be Tuesday night, April 29, 1975, 7:00 p.m. at the East Dining Hall, West Texas State University.

Dr. Anderson is a nationally known speaker being one of the leaders in the non-graded school and team teaching concepts in education. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Wisconsin and earned the Doctor of Philosophy Degree from the University of Chicago. He has had experience as a teacher and administrator at both the public school and the college level.

At the banquet meeting the outstanding student teachers of West Texas State University will be recognized and the Phi Delta Kappa of the Year Award will be presented. This is the Ladies Night Program to which spouses and guests of Phi Delta Kappans are invited.

Teachers and administrators in the Panhandle who are not members of Phi Delta Kappa are also invited.

The price of the banquet is $3.25 per person. Reservations must be made by April 24, 1975 and a check must accompany each reservation. Tickets can be reserved by contacting Dr. E.B. Posey, Box 186, West Texas State University, Canyon, Texas, 79016.

Heart Unit Is Commended For Campaign

The local chapter of the American Heart Association was commended by Betty Musick, district representative, for the collection campaign effort resulting in $2,500 over several months of activities.

Mrs. Musick commended the local chapter at a dinner meeting Friday evening and noted that the local chapter's fundraising campaign began last fall with a bike-a-thon, and has also included a business drive and a Greek Week marathon bike event.

Joyce Burkholder of Lubbock met with the local chapter at the dinner meeting Friday, April 18, to discuss the reorganization efforts for the heart association presently being considered in Texas.

Speaking for the group was Patricia Gruber, head of the nursing department at West Texas State University, who discussed the nurse's training program and student study of cardiac patient problems.

Reggie Reeves, local chapter president, was in charge of the business meeting as three new volunteer members were welcomed. Next meeting of the chapter will be May 7 at 5 p.m. in the office of chairman Reeves.

Karl A. Archuleta, graduate of Balboa High School in the Canal Zone, and now a sophomore at West Texas State, has recently been awarded an Army ROTC two-year scholarship.

Keychain Tags Are Available

Amarillo Crime Prevention Unit will distribute marked key chain tags for Canyon residents on April 29 and 30, according to Ted Sharp.

The key chain tags will be engraved with the driver's license numbers which enable officers to use a computer to locate the owners of lost keys when turned into the police department.

A distribution table will be set up at Taylor and Sons Food Store from 1-7 p.m. on Tuesday, April 29, and on Wednesday, April 30, distribution will be conducted at the Student Union Building of West Texas State University from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Hidden Falls Ranch Offers Summer Camping Experiences

Wesley Woodard has been named as the new director for Hidden Falls Ranch, near Wayside, which provides an active summer camping program for area youngsters in a non-denominational Christian setting.

Woodard and his wife, Jean, have recently moved into the camp director's quarters along with their four children, Laura, 9, John, 7, Alice, 4, and Aurilia, 2.

A graduate of Texas A&M University with a degree in business administration, Woodard later studied at Dallas Theological Seminary to earn the master's degree in theology with a major in Greek.

For the past 12 years Woodard has been working with the Christian Indian Ministries which operates a youth camp in southeastern Oklahoma. He was the administrative director for the Christian Indian Ministries for the past 3 1/2 years on a fulltime basis prior to accepting the position with Hidden Falls Ranch.

In the summer of 1974, Hidden Falls Ranch served almost 650 boys and girls between the ages of 8 and 17 years of age. The camp has a complete outdoor program with trained staff members supervising each group of seven campers.

The camp is nestled on a bluff 1,000 feet above the floor of Palo Duro Canyon and consists of 200 acres with an 80 acre campus featuring duplex bunkhouses with shower facilities for the campers. There are major camp areas for both boys and girls with other facilities including an infirmary, large dining hall and conference area, administration building, trading post, and cook's quarters.

The camp also includes areas for summer crafts, tennis courts, shuffleboard courts, a rodeo arena, rifle and archery ranges, basketball, volleyball and badminton courts, a horseshoe pitching area and softball field.

In addition, the camp has stables with 20-25 saddle horses for the campers to ride scenic paths. The campsite also includes an additional 120 acres of rugged land with huge cedar and cottonwood trees, springs, streams and waterfalls for outdoor activity.

The Garden Spot

By RICK WILCOX

A number of plants can be profitably started indoors and transplanted to the garden. Tomatoes, lettuce and chard are all common vegetables easy to start indoors. Lettuce is especially good because it can be used to fill in gaps from harvested plants during the season.

To start plants indoors requires only a plastic dishpan or 2, some potting soil and a suitable fertilizer. The pans are the ordinary discount store variety. The soil can be purchased, or you can make your own from a half and half mixture of vermiculite and peat moss. Regular garden soil will do if lightened with peat or vermiculite and sterilized in an oven to destroy mold spores. The danger from unsterilized soil is "damping off," a soil-borne mold which strikes and kills newly-germinated seedlings. After preparing the soil medium, seed lightly and cover the seeds to a depth approximately equal to the diameter of the seed. Moisten well but do not saturate. By keeping your flats in a dark place until germination, or covering them with newspaper, it should not be necessary to water heavily until the seedlings are up. It is sufficient to keep the soil just damp.

Once your plants are up, they'll need light. A bright north window will do, but by no means let your seedlings take direct sunlight (except morning sun) through a glass window. Taken this way, the light will be too intense. Another excellent light source is an artificial grow lamp. These can be purchased in many garden shops and lighting departments and fit standard fluorescent fixtures. About 16 hours per day from such a lamp located 1-2 inches from your plants will keep them growing beautifully.

A good fertilizer is a must. Peat and vermiculite have no nutrients of their own. My favorite is a water soluble liquid fish fertilizer. Properly diluted, it goes a long way and is very economical. No, it doesn't stink up the house. A similar product is made from seaweed and works well. Again, these can be purchased from garden shops and departments.

Before your seedlings can be transplanted outside, they must be "hardened off." This is done by gradually exposing them to outdoor conditions. Avoid harsh sun or wind. Start with 30 minutes outside the first day and gradually increase the daily exposure. They should be able to take the whole day outside after a week or two. Thereafter they can be transplanted into the garden. Pick a cloudy or cool day with minimal wind. Protect the newly transplanted seedlings with a sunshade and windbreak for a few days and water well. If you are sure to scoop out the roots from the flat in a ball of soil when you transplant, most of your plants should come through fine. Most seedlings are remarkably tough.

By the way, if you do not have room for an outside garden, or if you want to raise some fresh vegetables indoors during the winter months, you can grow lettuce, radishes and tomatoes to a health maturity in flats or pots indoors with your fish fertilizer and some plain old Tender Loving Care. If you plan to raise full-grown plants inside, I strongly recommend the artificial lights, especially in the winter when natural sun is brief and unreliable. Until next time...

Secretary Chapter Extends Honors To Boss-Top Member

Tierra Blanca chapter of the National Secretaries Association (International) held their annual "secretary-boss of the year" banquet Thursday evening, April 24, at the Hereford Country Club.

Virginia Byars of Canyon, chapter president, served as mistress of ceremonies for the evening and invocation was presented by Wilma Johnson, secretary's week chairman.

Chris Thomas, the chapter's 1974 Secretary of the Year, presented the award to her successor, Mrs. Louise A. Gunther of Hereford. Mrs. Gunther is executive secretary for Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative, Inc. in Hereford and has been in the secretarial profession for 24 years including 8½ years with her present employer. Married to Earl Gunther, Mrs. Gunther has been a member of NSA for eight years and served as chapter president during 1972.

Honored as the Boss of the Year was Dr. Hubert Oppe, head of the Sociology Department at West Texas State University, who was nominated for the honor by his secretary, Kelli McBride of Canyon.

Others honored during the banquet were Dr. and Mrs. Jack

Nance and Mrs. Carolyn Keith who have been working with the Tierra Blanca Chapter during the past year on a series of self-concept workshops. Dr. Nance is the coordinator of Human Relations Studies for the Department of Education at WTSU and Mrs. Keith is director of guidance and counseling at Texas State Technical Institute, Amarillo.

Also recognized were former Bosses of the Year; Dr. C. C. Callarman of West Texas State University and James T. Hull of Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative.

During Secretaries Week, the Tierra Blanca chapter has recognized three secretaries of the day in both Hereford and Canyon. Recognized in Canyon were Vernell Harbin, secretary to E. T. Cummings, CPA; Bobby Hathaway, secretary to Cary Magness at Hosea Foster Agency; and Vi Taylor, secretary to the School of Nursing at West Texas State University.

Recognized with the daily honors in Hereford were JoAnn Dwyer of Big Brothers-Big Sisters; Betty Willson of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce; and Cindy Parton of High Plains Savings and Loan Association.

Potting House Plants Is Agent's Topic

The use of plants in the house has become increasingly popular to create atmosphere of warmth and life. There is a wide range of tropical and subtropical foliage and flowering plants from which to choose.

Processes that determine a plant's growth are controlled by environmental factors. These are light, temperature, humidity, air, soil moisture and soil fertility. Light is the most critical need. Natural light can be supplemented with fluorescent and incandescent light. Most house plants need a minimum of at least four hours light a day. The majority of house plants thrive on temperature from 60° to 75° temperature.

One of the most practical methods for keeping a favorable humidity around indoor plants is to group the pots on a leakproof tray covered with pebbles. Keep the water level in the tray just below the top layer of pebbles.

Moisture will rise around the plants and keep the flowers and foliage in much more attractive condition.

Overwatering causes more failures with indoor plants than any other. Too much water fills the air spaces in the soil thus depleting the oxygen required by the roots.

Overwatering is less likely to occur if the plants are double potted. This method supplies water to the plant through the sides of the pot.

When double potting, place the plant in a porous clay pot, with no more than 4 inches from roots to sides of container. Set this pot inside a larger ceramic or plastic container and fill the space between with sphagnum moss. Raise the height of the clay pot if necessary by putting coarse gravel in the bottom of the container (Do not select caliche rock). Water the soil and moss as the plant needs moisture it can draw through porous clay pot. Clay pots evaporate as much as 50% of water through pot walls.

Plants need a good potting mixture or growing medium to anchor roots and provide physical support. It's a store house for plant nutrients and water as well as a source of oxygen for the roots.

There are many growing mediums under research with plant scientists. A general type of medium for the novice to use consists of three parts:

- 1 part soil — sterilize at 200° for 1 hour in the oven.
- 1 part organic matter which adds air space, reduces weight, keeps mixture from compacting — such as peat moss and compost.
- 1 part coarse aggregate — improves pore space and drainage and reduces weight; some available include perlite, vermiculite, shredded plastics.

To improve drainage use smooth stones or broken pieces of clay pot over drain hole. To help drainage in terrariums use a layer of activated charcoal in the bottom.

Plants need sixteen elements to grow and thrive. Most of these are found in the soil but for a supplemental feeding program use a 5-10-10, for maintenance or 10-10-10 for moderate growth. For rapid growth use 20-10-10. It helps to select a fertilizer with chelated iron. The numbers on fertilizer labels represent nitrogen, phosphorous and pot ash. It's more convenient to select fertilizers prepared for house plants.

For insect control contact John Brazzil, your County Extension Agent (Agriculture) or the local florist from which the plant was purchased.

Keep plants clean and free from dust on the leaves. Slick sturdy leaves may be wiped with cloth moistened in water. Mist the fuzzy leaves of softer plants to remove dust.

Periodically, two to three times a year, flood your pots in a tub or sink deep enough to cover pots to leach out unused fertilizers. This flushing helps remove the buildup of salts in the soil due to frequent light waterings.

Good maintenance practices are often the key to healthy house plants.

ROTC Corps Sweetheart Crowned At Military Ball

Coronation of the Reserve Officers Training Corps Sweetheart and her Court highlighted the annual Military Ball sponsored by the West Texas State University Scabbard and Blade Society Friday evening, April 25, in the ballroom of the Student Union Building.

Lila G. Cobb, a university junior majoring in elementary education, and wife of the ROTC Corps Commander, Darrell Cobb, was crowned as this year's Corps Sweetheart by Mrs. Sarah Luke, wife of the WTSU professor of military science, Lt. Col. John B. Luke.

The coronation was a highlight of the evening and the Sweetheart and her Court were presented with bouquets of roses by Brigadier General Robert Arter, commanding general of the Third ROTC Region, who was a special guest for the evening.

Other honored guests for the occasion were Dr. Irby B. Carruth of the WTSU Board of Regents and Dr. Lloyd I. Watkins, WTSU president.

The Corps Sweetheart, Mrs. Cobb is the daughter of Col. and Mrs. R. E. Story of Corpus Christi. She is a member of the Texas Student Education Association and Little Star, a sister sorority to Scabbard and Blade, and works as a secretary in the Military Science Office. She and her husband presently reside in Amarillo.

Recognized as Mrs. Cobb's Court were Miss Dianna L. Marshall, a university sophomore from El Paso, who was selected as the Advanced Platoon Sweetheart, and Miss Donna L. Stodghill, university sophomore from Silverton, who was honored as the Basic Platoon Sweetheart.

Sweetheart nominees for Corps and Platoon were judged by a panel of judges for poise, personality, self confidence, character, patriotism, attitude toward the Military, willingness for participation in ROTC functions, and appearance.

HOW'S The Electric Company DOING?

Let's ask Johnnie Cowan, division stores superintendent . . .

1962
COST $35.70

1975
COST $81.35
128% INCREASE

"Johnnie, what are poles costing these days?"

"This pole, like the one in back of your house, cost $35.70 in 1962, now it costs $81.35, a 128% increase."

That's part of the reason the cost of electricity is up somewhat . . . everything costs us more . . . and if we don't replace wornout things . . . well, your electric service will suffer. We don't want that, and we're sure you don't.

The Future IS Electric!

HOMEMAKER COURSES for both boys and girls at Canyon High School are taught by Mrs. Janet Fincher, standing, and Mrs. Cathy Cameron. The two instructors have a combined total of 120 students each quarter in four classes each. Both have a conference period for students and a conference period for home visits included in their agenda.

Course Offers Challenge

Useful homemaker practice is taught through the public school systems across the nation and here in Canyon the first touch of "making a home" is open to any student interested in registering for the courses.

Although school is almost out for the summer, many home economics students will continue with summer studies and the cooperative education homemaker students will be seeking their job placements for the fall semester.

In homemaker programs, students gain a basic understanding of nutrition requirements, food preparation, management, clothing selection as well as design and construction at the sewing machine.

Students are also given in-depth studies of personal and family relations, child growth and development as well as consumer education points, according to the instructors.

Specific areas of homemaker are also included at the junior-senior level in special areas of homemaker such as home and family living, housing and home furnishings, as well as home management for boys in a "Bachelor Survival" course.

At the beginning home economics level, Mrs. Janet Laycock instructs ninth grade girls on the basics of clothing construction, foods, child development and consumer information.

Although she instructs the students beginning level of home economics, Mrs. Laycock finds that many students already know the basics of sewing and cooking through their extracurricular involvement in 4-H and other similar programs.

Mrs. Laycock is instructing her first year of home economics at Canyon Junior High School this year, but had previously taught in Austin and Shamrock Schools at various levels. She holds the BS degree in textiles and clothing from the University of Texas and her husband, Kenneth, is the executive director of the Panhandle Education Services Organization (PESO).

After students have taken their junior high home economics training (or even those who have not) they have further opportunity to study homemaker principles as students in the high school program.

The Homemaker I program of the high school designates "clothing" as the main course of study for one quarter with "foods" as the emphasis for another quarter. The third quarter of Homemaker I is devoted to a series of study units such as personal and family relations, child growth and development, consumer education information, housing and management of resources and this course is a prerequisite for students planning to take Homemaker II.

Both Homemaker I or II are three quarter courses for students with special interest areas of home economics being taught in quarter courses such as home and family living, housing and home furnishings, child development, consumer education, home management which are open to boys and girls of either the junior or senior level in school.

In addition the high school's homemaker program includes a cooperative education program for girls and boys of the junior-senior classification. Prerequisite for the cooperative program is that students must be 16 years of age, have parent's permission and must seek an occupation in a home economics related field such as child care service, clothing service, food service, home furnishings area, or institutional and home management service areas.

Canyon High School's home economics teachers are Mrs. Janet Fincher, Mrs. Cathy Cameron and Miss Janet Sargent.

Mrs. Fincher is presently teaching for her third year in the local department and is a graduate of Texas Tech University with a B.S. degree in home economics education with a second major study area in clothing and textiles. Mrs. Fincher's husband, Irwin, is employed as an engineering assistant for Pioneer Natural Gas.

Mrs. Cameron, also a graduate of Texas Tech University, is in her fourth year of teaching home economics at Canyon High School. She holds the B.S. degree in home economics education and clothing textiles field. Her husband, Wayne, is in the savings and loan business field.

The third instructor for high school home economics is Miss Janet Sargent, another graduate of Texas Technological University in Lubbock. This is her fifth year with the Canyon School system in the home economics field. Her first year here was as a home economics teacher splitting her time between the junior high and high school program and since that time she has been the cooperative education instructor for the home economics related occupations program.

A native of Lubbock, Miss Sargent holds the B.S. and M.S. degrees in home economics education and had not previously encountered a cooperative education program in home economics except as a student teacher.

In 1971, the cooperative education program for home economics was instituted at Canyon High School. Students taking the course work a minimum of three hours per day on the job (or 15 hours per week) and also spend one hour each day in the classroom with workbook study in their related job area. The course offers two credits per quarter when three quarters are completed.

"We currently have 20 students on the cooperative education program in home economics," related Miss Sargent, "and all are primarily employed in Canyon in various types of jobs with a home economics field background."

"We have several working in the hospital kitchen, university cafeteria, and several in fast food service areas such as the local restaurants. Previously we had several involved in child care and students may also participate in clothing services such as bridal consultants, dressmaker or tailor's aides, as clothing sales clerks or in the home furnishings sales and decorating areas," she concluded.

And so as school bells are ready to ring the "start of summer vacation", Miss Sargent and students planning to participate in the cooperative home economics program next fall are getting ready to begin a job interviews for placement.

Meanwhile Mrs. Finch and Mrs. Cameron are making plans for the summer study courses of home economics which will include one adult course and a student course. Both are set to be held in June with the adult area to possibly include family awareness subjects on family planning, child abuse, birth defects and topics of this nature.

The student's summer home economics course will be based on the majority of interest shown by survey of those students planning to gain the credits offered through summer study. Mrs. Finch related that summer courses presently being considered are "self defense for women" and/or special sewing interests such as bean bag chairs.

J.W. Spencer, Charles Conatser, Frank Begert and R.C. Simpson Jr., serving as the first board.
In 1967, the district was split and Randall County became the Palo Duro district with SCS headquarters behind the local ASCS office.
The SCS specialists here — District Conservationist Bill Casteel and Soil Conservationist Don Dolle — work hand-in-hand with the district officers in preaching the gospel of soil and water conservation.

In Randall County, the district and the SCS are primarily concerned with fighting wind erosion — still considered the number one erosion problem in the area.
The effects of the district and service are self-evident on windy days in Randall County.

However, more than 400 other operators have signed agreements with the SCS for instituting only portions of the overall conservation programs.
Casteel figures the district and office have helped between 60 and 70 per cent of the farm operators in the county on conservation projects.
Through such efforts, he figures, farmers here can conserve the soil and are "able to maintain it at the present level of use and can expect to produce at the current production level for future generations."
The district and SCS not only help local farmers and ranchers, but their services are available for just about anybody.
SCS specialists aided, for example, West Texas State University officials in figuring out what kind of turf would best wear under constant football cleating in Kimbrough Memorial Stadium.
They also aided university School of Agriculture officials in designing and perfecting a feed-lot population abatement system.
And, they've helped refuge managers at Buffalo Lake figure out how to remove nutrients from the rich lake bottom soil after water was drained from what was once a Panhandle playground.
SCS and district officials are often called upon by subdivision developers and horticulturists agency.

Several bills pending in the two houses would call for regulation of specific utility industries. Some, for example, speak only to regulation of telephone companies in the state.
Another bill Canyon commissioners will be discussing with area legislators Monday is a bill which would make the county the appraising and tax collecting entity for all governmental units within the county.
Under the proposed legislation, Canyon, the Canyon School District, and the South Randall County Hospital District would depend on the Randall County tax office for appraising of property and assessing and collecting taxes. Various regulatory bodies would be placed over the county, under the legislation, and a board of review consisting of officials from each participating entity would also be over the tax office operation.
Metcalf said he favors the bill because it would provide some economy in operation of tax offices.
"Presently there's a duplication of services and increased cost to the taxpayer," he said. "This could feasibly be done by one office."
Metcalf said he questions only one part of the legislation.
"I'm in favor of the bill," he said. "The only thing is the establishment of personnel to run it. Should the administrator be elected or appointed?"

Umbarger. . .
has nothing "for sure" on the project.
Bill McMorries, who engineered the proposal, said he understands the FHA is not funding such projects.
"Right now," he said, "it looks like a 'no,' but I'm still hopeful."
A representative of the FHA in Temple said only that funds are not now currently available for the Umbarger project.
Bob Lord, engineer for the PRPC, said a similar water system for Washburn east of Amarillo has been funded under the FHA.
He said Friday he would check with FHA officials to determine the status of the Umbarger request.
George Louder, executive director of the PRPC, indicated there are few — if any — other programs under which funds might be allocated for the Umbarger system.
Raeff supposes he'll just wait.
"I think we're gonna fool around until the water gets ruined," he said.
"It looks to me like as much money as the government spends for stuff that's not necessary we ought to get some here. It's necessary for the future of the community."
Raeff contends that a good water supply system could negate the need for a sewage system because the problems are directly related.
He also contends that not only is a good water source necessary for the continued well-being of the community, but it is a prime requisite for attracting any growth to the on-the-highway village.
"If we had a good water supply and sewer system we wouldn't have any trouble with retired people moving in here to retire," he said. "We have the church, the gas, the electricity and the land."
"I've had people stop here and ask if we have sites available. I say yes and then they start asking about utilities and I tell them we've got everything but water and sewer. It's like having a boat and no water in the country to run it on."

referral.
The chamber manager, who is deluged each fall and spring by married students, single students, married and single faculty members and other folks just interested in living in Canyon, said the problem in housing in the city is both a problem of a lack of available housing and a lack of information on vacant property.
He said the city has about 25 apartment houses, but few rent houses, and the bulk of his requests call for two- or three-bedroom homes.
"I've had three houses called in (as available for rent) during the last six months," he said.
Right now, Black said, he has 30 requests for married and single persons looking for housing of any kind in the city.
"They want two- to three-bedroom furnished or unfurnished houses and I haven't even got one," he said.
Chamber President Weldon Trice is expected to lead off the Thursday meeting. Trice called the session after meeting with the disgruntled students two weeks ago. He is dean of men at WTSU.
An architect was to meet with Trice and other university officials last week to inspect the old Stafford Hall dormitory building on campus for possible renovation for married student housing.
